PICTURES OF MOSBY'S RAID IN BERRYVILLE. San Francisco, Dec. 16, 1899.

Mr. John S. Russell, Berryville, Va.: Dear John :- I have mailed you a set of photographs of the Berryville miles down the valley to the place ceived. where he started from. In 1867 Captain McAleer, of Baltimore, visited the scene, made sketches, and procured photographs of many of our mer. He nehial and lung diseases is more fully then went to Paris and had the picture painted by two distinguished artists

> we reached the east bank of the Sher-andoah—"the daughter of the stars." mills and wheat stacks in L udoun two You are near me, listening intently to You are near me, listening won—to cross Grant's orders were no more directed an order I am giving you—to cross over the river and find out what was in front. You returned af er dark, when I was esleep er joying a soldier's dream, "and the sentinel stars had set their watch in the eky," and told me that a long train heavily guarded was passing on the pike. In a few minutes all were mounted and moving to the at-

No. 2 represents the Berryville fight and stampede of the train guard. I am with Sam Chapman's company that was kept in reserve with the howitzer that is firing while Richards' squadron charged at one point on the line, and William Chapman and Glasscock with their companies charged at another. Stockton Terry, of Lynchburg, is near me with the battalion colors. A body of the enemy formed behind a body of the enemy formed behind a stone fence, and made some resistance. Here Lewis Ade, of Glasscock's company, was killed. I remember very well when Guy Broadwater rode up and reported it to me in the midst of the fight. All I said was, "I can't help it." He was a fine boy. Some of his family now live in California. Do you remember live in California. Do you remember bow the yellow-jackets routed us, and were near spoiling all my plaus that day? The howitzer came up at a gallop and was unlimbered on a knoll that commanded the pike. The gun was put in position right over a nest of yellow-jackets. They were home rulers, like he Boers, and instantly a swarm flew out to repel the invasion of their terri-tory. My men had stood a volley from body of infantry on the pike, but the a body of intantry on the pike, but the sting of the yellow-jackets was too much for their courses. The horses reared and plunged, the mearsn away from the gun. Whether the scene was sublime or ridiculous depends upon one's point of view at the time. My horse was fractic and I felt a road day. norse was frantic, and I felt a good deal like Hercules did when he put on his shirt of the Centaur and couldn't pu'l t off We were on the verge of a panc-a few minutes' delay would give the enemy time to recover from their surprise. A shot from the howitzer was to be the signal for the squadrons to charge. They were waiting. But just then one of the men—Babcock, I think it was—rushed forward, recaptured the nowitzer, and dragged it off. The yellow-jackets returned in triumph to their hole in the ground. In a minute a shell burst among the wagons; it knocked off the head of a mule; the uard stampeded, while the braying of he mules could be heard above the roar of the gun. The mules we captured supplied General Lee's army with transportation, and the drove of fine beeves was sent as a present and fur ni-hed beefsteaks for his soldiers. You will observe in the picture representing our return a figure on horseback like a troubadour playing on a violin. It is Bob Ridley (Eastham) He got it from a headquarters wagon. Bob is pl ying a tune to which he had tanced—"Malbrook has gone to the wars." Our object was to imped-Speridan's maich.

I was sorry I could not be with you at the u.v-iling of the monument to our men at Front Royal; and I dissent rom some historical statements in Mayor Richards' address. I do not agree with him that our men were nung in compliance with General Grant's orders to Sheridan. They were not hung in obedience to the orders of a superior, but from revenge. A man who acts from revenge simply obeys his own impulses. Major Richards says the orders were "a dead letter" afer I retaliated; which implies that they had not been before. I see no evidence to support such a conclusion. In his letter in The Richmond Times Major Richards says that Sheridan's dispatches about hanging our men were "visionary," i. e., he never hung any. If so, the order had always been "a dead letter." No one ever heard of his hangings until his dispatches were published a few years ago. Sheridan was then dead, but his posthumous memoirs say nothing about hanging, although two pages are devoted to an account of the killing of Meigs, and Custer's burning dwelling houses in Rockingham county in revenge. Meigs was not killed by my men; we never went that far up the Valley. Sheridan, dispatches in the war records about the men he hung were not even a revelation to me,

Sheridan had communicated Grant's dispatch of August 16 to any to be exccuted it would have been to Blazer, who commanded a picked corps that was specially detailed to look after us. In his report Blazer speaks of cipturing some of my men; he never mentions hanging any. Those he captured were certainly not hung, for I saw them when they came home after the close of the war. The following dispatches record the rise and fall of Blezer: "Charlestown. August 20, 1864.

Sheridan to Augur, Washington: "I have 100 men who will take the contract to clean out Mosby's gang. I want 100 Spencer rifles for them. Send them to me if they can be found in Washington. P. H. SHERIDAN, "Major-General Commanding.

(Indorsement):
'Approved: By order of the Secretary C. A. Dana, "Assistant Secretary." of War.

"Harper's Ferry, Nov. 19, 1864 teverson to Sheridan :

"Two of Captain Blaz r's men came in this morning—privates Harrs and Johnson. They report that Mosby with 300 men attacked Blazer near Kabletown yesterday about 11 o'clock. They say that the entire command, with the exception of themselves, was captured or killed. I have ordered Major Cong-don with 300 Twelfth Pennsylvania Cavalry to Kabletown to bury dead and take care of wounded, if any, and report ad facts be can learn. I shall imraid that made Sheridan retreat fifty mediately furnish report as soon as re-

Exit Blezer. Major Richards commanded in the Blazer fight; I was not present. When we sent Blazer and his band of prisorers to Richmond they would not have painted by two distinguished artists painted by two distinguished artists. The paintings were also photographed in Paris; those I send you are copies made here. Beu Palmer, of Richmond, owns the original paintings.

No. 1 represents the battalion just as No. 1 represents the battalion just as who will be confiderates; and pathetically describes the conflagration. He ought to know that there had been nurning of a whole and wheat stacks in L udoun two rolls and wheat stacks in L udoun two against my command than Early's. Augusta and Rockingham were deso-lated, where we never had been. But I can't see the slightest connection be tween burning forage and provisions and hanging prisoners. One is permit-ted by the code of war, the other is not. After General Lee's surrender I received a communication from General Hancock asking for mine. declined to do so until I could bear whether Joe Johnston would surrender or continue the war. We sgreed on a five days armistice. When it expired nothing had been heard from Johnston. I met a flag of truce at Millwood, and had proposed an extension of ten days, but received through Major Russell a message from Hancock refusing it and informing me that unless I surrendered immediately he would proceed to devastate the country. The reply I sent by Russell was: "I'ell General Harcock he is able to do it." Hancock then bad 40,000 men at Winchester. The next day I disbanded my battalion to save the country from being made a desert. If any one doubts this, let him read Hancock's report. If it was legitimate for Hancock to lay waste the country after I had suspended heatil-ties, surely it was equally so for Grant to do it when I was doing all the damage in my power to his army. Stanton warned Hancock not to meet me in person under a flag of truce, for fear I would treacherously kill him. Hancock replied that he would send an officer to meet me. He sent General Chapman. The attention Grant paid to us shows that we did him a great deal of harm. Keeping my men in prison weakened us as much as o hang them. Major Richards complains of the "debasing epithets" Sheridan applied to us. I have read his reports, correspondence and memoirs, but have never seen the epithets. In common with all northern and many southern people, he called us guerrillas. Although I have never adopted it I have never resented as an insult the term "guerrilla" when applied to me. Sheri-"guerrilla" when applied to me. Sheri-dan says that my battalion was "the most redoubtable" partisan body that he met. I certainly take no exception to that. He makes no charge of any act of inhumenity against us. The highest compliment ever paid to the efficiency of our command is the efficiency of our command is the statement in Sheridan's Memoirs that while his army largely outnumbered Early's, yet their line of battle strength was about equal on account of the detachments he was compelled to make to guard the border and his line of communication from partisan attanks. Ours was the only force behind nim. At that time the records show that in round numbers Early had 17,000

> (war), and simply means one engaged in the minor operations of war. I had only five companies of cavalry when Sheridan came in August, 1864, when Sheridan came in August, 1864, to the Shenandonh Valley. A sixth was organized in September. Two more companies joined me in April, 1865, after the evacuation of Richmond. They came just in time to surrender. I don't care a straw whether Custer was solely responsible for the hanging of our men, or jointly with others. It we believe the reports of the generals none of them ever even heard of the hanging of our mer; they must have committed suicide. Contemporary evidence is against Custer. I wonder if he also denied burning dwelling houses around Berryville. Rostopchin, the governor of Moscow, claimed the credit of the burning of it when it was thought to have been the cause of Napoleon's retreat, but after it became known that it was not the cause of it, to escape the odium he denied all responsibility for it and declared that it was done by incendiaries for plunder. I once called at the White House, in 1876, to see Gen. Grant; sent him my card and was promptly admitted. When I came out of his room one of the secretaries told me that Gen. Custer had called the day before but that Gen. Grant refused to see him. The incident is related in the Life of Custer. A few weeks afterward Custer was killed in the Sitting Bull present for duty, and Sheridan had

Mrs. Julia Bartle, of Coverdale, Pa., writes: "One night after I had been awake with my eight years old boy, with the croup, I gave him a dose of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Alexandria, Va. in Mosby's command." If that is true I must have commanded a larger army than Sheridan. I didn't know it. He describes the pathos of the scenes that might have been if the "set vere and cruel order" had been executed to transfer the families from that region to Fort McHenry, and says it would have "paralyzed" my command. If so, that would have been a more humane way of getting r d of it than killing the men. Now I have never considered women and children necessary appendages to an aimy; on the contrary, I would rather class them with what (agsar in his commentaries calls impediments. Homer's Bichards says, married in that section, I think that if Sheridan had captured his wife and mother-in law and sent them to prison, instead of going into moverning, he would be suited and mother-in law and sent them to prison, instead of going into moverning, he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning, he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning, he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning, he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning, he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning, he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning, he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning, he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning, he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning, he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning, he would be suited and former in the ward of going into moverning he would be suited and the Mosby's command." If that and mother-in law and sent them to prison. instead of going into mourning, he would have felt a l the wrath and imitated the example of the flerce Achilles when he heard that Patrocius, his friend, had been killed and his armor had been captured. "Now perish Troy! he said, and rushed to fight."

A SURE CURE FOR CROUP.

Twenty-five Years' Constant Use with out a Failure.

The first indication of croup is hoarseness, and in a child subject to that disease it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Cnamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child be-comes hourse, or even after the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the at-tack. It is used in many thousands of homes in this broad land and never disappoints the anxious mothers. We have yet to learn of a single instance in which it has not proved effectual.
